42AB. Home detention orders

- (1) A court may make a home detention order in relation to an offender if the court –
 - (a) convicts the offender of an offence or offences; and
 - (b) considers that, were it not to make a home detention order, it would have sentenced the offender to a term of imprisonment (whether or not it would have suspended all or part of the sentence) in relation to the offence or offences; and
 - (c) is of the opinion that to impose a less onerous sentence than a home detention order in relation to the offence or offences would not satisfy the purposes for which the home detention order is imposed.
- (2) A court may only make a home detention order in relation to an offender if –
 - (a) it is of the opinion that, in all the circumstances, it is appropriate to make the order; and
 - (b) it has considered a pre-sentence report as to whether the offender

- is suitable for a home detention order; and
- (c) the offender consents to the order being made; and
 - (d) the offender is to reside, during the operational period of the order, at premises in relation to which the court is satisfied it is suitable for a home detention order to be made; and
 - (e) each person who has attained the age of 18 years and who resides at premises (other than group premises) at which the offender is to reside during the operational period of the order has consented to a home detention order being made in relation to the offender; and
 - (f) the relevant circumstances do not exist in relation to the offender.
- (3) For the purposes of subsection (2), the relevant circumstances exist in relation to an offender if –
- (a) any one of the offences in relation to which the offender is being sentenced by the court is a family violence offence, a violent offence or a sexual offence and the premises at which the offender would reside during the intended operational period of the order are premises at which a victim of the offence is to, or is likely to, reside during all or part of that period; or

- (b) the court is of the opinion that there is a significant risk that the offender may commit a violent offence, or a sexual offence, during the intended operational period of the order; or
- (c) one or more of the offences in relation to which the offender is being sentenced by the court is a relevant drug offence and the premises at which the offender would reside during the intended operational period of the order are premises that were used in relation to the commission of the relevant drug offence.

(4) A court may make –

- (a) more than one home detention order in relation to an offender, except in relation to the same offence; and
- (b) a home detention order in relation to an offender who is already and

- (c) a home detention order in relation to an offender who is, or is to be, subject to a community correction order; and
- (d) a home detention order in relation to an offender who is subject to a community service order.

42AC. Home detention premises

A home detention order in relation to an offender must specify the premises (the home detention premises) that are to be the premises at which the offender must, in accordance with section 42AD(1)(b), reside during the operational period of the order.

42AD. Core conditions of home detention order

- (1) A home detention order is subject to the following conditions:
 - (a) the offender must not, during the operational period of the order, commit an offence that is punishable by imprisonment;
 - (b) the offender must, during the operational period of the order, reside at the home detention premises;

detention premises during the operational period of the order.

- (3) For the purposes of subsection (1)(c), an offender is, for a relevant reason, not on the home detention premises if the offender is not on the premises –
- (a) because the offender is travelling to or from, or is at, premises at which the offender is seeking urgent medical treatment or dental treatment; or
 - (b) because it is necessary to not be on the premises in order to avoid, or minimise a serious risk of, the death of, or injury to, the offender or another person; or
 - (c) with the approval, of a probation officer, given –
 - (i) so as to enable the offender to comply with a special condition; or
 - (ii) so as to enable the offender to seek or engage in employment; or
 - (iii) so as to enable the offender to attend an educational or training course or activity; or

- (iv) so as to enable the offender to attend a rehabilitative or re-integrative activity or program; or
 - (v) so as to enable the offender to attend a court; or
 - (vi) for any other purpose approved by the probation officer.
- (4) For the purposes of subsection (1)(g), a direction in relation to electronic monitoring means a direction, given by –
- (a) a police officer; or
 - (b) a probation officer; or
 - (c) another person whose functions involve the installation or operation of a device, or a system, used for the purposes of electronic monitoring –

21. Part 5B inserted

After section 43 of the Principal Act, the following Part is inserted:

PART 5B – COMMUNITY CORRECTION ORDERS

42AM. Interpretation

In this Part, unless the contrary intention appears – core condition, in relation to a community correction order, means a condition specified in section 42AO;

operational period, in relation to a community correction order, means the period specified, in accordance with section 42AQ(1), in the order, as that period is varied, if at all, under this Division;

special condition, in relation to a community correction order, means a condition that is imposed on the order under section 42AP(1).

42AN. Community correction orders

- (1) A court may make a community correction order in relation to an offender

Act 2017
Act No. of

Part 3 – Sentencing Act 1997 Amended

s. 21

who the court has found guilty of, or convicted of, an offence.

(2) Without limiting the circumstances in which a court may make a community correction order in relation to an offender, a court may make such an order in relation to an offender if –

(a) the court wholly suspends a sentence of imprisonment in relation to the offender in respect of the offence or offences to which the order is to relate; or

(b) were the offence to which the order relates not an offence against a provision specified in Schedule 3, or an attempt to commit such an offence, the court would have imposed in relation to the offence a sentence of imprisonment in relation to the offender and wholly suspended the sentence.

(3) A court may make –

(a) more than one community correction order in relation to an offender, except in relation to the same offence; and

(b) a community correction order in relation to an offender who is already subject to a community correction order; and

- (c) a community correction order in relation to an offender who is, or is to be, subject to a home detention order; and
- (d) a community correction order in relation to an offender who is subject to a community service order; and
- (e) a community correction order in relation to an offender who is subject to a probation order.

42AO. Core conditions of community correction orders

A community correction order is subject to the following conditions:

- (a) the offender must not, during the operational period of the order, commit an offence punishable by imprisonment;
- (b) the offender must report, before a day specified in the order, to a probation officer at the place specified in the order;
- (c) the offender must, during the operational period of the order, report to a probation officer as required by the probation officer;

- (d) the offender must, during the operational period of the order, comply with the reasonable and lawful directions of a probation officer or a supervisor;
- (e) the offender must not, during the operational period of the order, leave or remain outside Tasmania without the permission of a probation officer;
- (f) the offender must, during the operational period of the order, give notice to a probation officer of any change of address or employment before, or within 2 working days after, the change.

42AP. Special conditions

- (1) A community correction order may include any or all of the following conditions:
 - (a) the offender must, during the operational period of the order, appear before the court at the places, days and times, that the court specifies in the order;

- (m) the offender must not, during the operational period of the order, be at a place other than the premises at which the offender resides during the periods, of the days, specified in the condition;
 - (n) any other condition, with which the offender must comply, that the court thinks appropriate.
- (2) A court must impose on a community correction order at least one of the special conditions referred to in subsection (1)(c) or (d).
- (3) A court is to impose on a community correction order a special condition (other than a special condition referred to in subsection (1)(c) or (d)) only if the court is satisfied that it is necessary to satisfy the purposes for which the order is imposed and the special condition is proportionate to the offence, or offences, in relation to which the order is imposed.
- (4) A special condition of a community correction order may specify that the condition applies during the whole, or any part, of the operational period of the order.
- (5) The special conditions of a home detention order made in respect of a person are, during the operational period of the order, unless the court making the order directs otherwise, concurrent with –

- (a) the conditions, of each other community correction order in relation to that person, that are in force during the operational period of that other order; and
- (b) the conditions, of each home detention order in relation to that person, that are in force during the operational period of the home detention order; and
- (c) the conditions, of each community service order or probation order in relation to that person, that are in force.

42AQ. Operational period of community correction order

- (1) A court that makes a community correction order in relation to an offender must specify the period during which the offender to whom the order relates must comply with the order (the operational period).
- (2) Subject to subsection (3), the operational period of a community correction order may not be specified to be more than 3 years.

Part 3 – Sentencing Act 1997 Amended

- (3) A court must not make or vary a community correction order against an offender for such a period that, as a result of the making of the order, the total consecutive operational periods of all the community correction orders in relation to the offender would be more than 3 years.
- (4) A community correction order remains in force until the operational period expires or the order is cancelled under this Act, whichever occurs first.

42AR. Commencement of operational period of community correction order

- (1) Subject to subsection (4), a court that makes a community correction order must specify in the order when the operational period of the order commences.
- (2) For the purposes of subsection (1), a court may specify in a community correction order that the operational period of the order commences –
 - (a) on the day on which the order is made or a later day specified in the order; or
 - (b) when the operational period of a home detention order in relation to the offender ceases; or

- (c) when the offender lawfully ceases to be imprisoned under a sentence of imprisonment that has not been wholly suspended.
- (3) If a sentence of imprisonment has been imposed on an offender by a court and the sentence has not been wholly suspended, the court may not specify in a community correction order that the operational period of the order commences on a day that is to occur during a period when the offender would be in prison or in detention.
- (4) A court may specify in a community correction order in relation to an offender an operational period of the order that is to commence before, during or after the operational period of a home detention order in relation to the offender.

42AS. Limitation on number of hours of community service

- (1) The maximum number of hours that a court may order community service to be performed, in accordance with a special condition, referred to in section 42AP(1)(d), that is imposed on a community correction order in relation to one or more offences, is 240.
- (2) A court that makes a community correction order in relation to an offender must not require the offender to perform, under the community correction order, community service for a number of hours that, aggregated with the number of hours of community service remaining to be completed under a community correction order, or a community service order, to which the offender is already subject, would exceed 240.

- (3) This section does not apply to an MPCSO.

42AT. Forms of community service

- (1) A probation officer may arrange for an offender, who is subject to a community correction order on which is imposed a special condition referred to in section 42AP(1)(d), to perform community service for the benefit of a victim of an offence in relation to which the order was imposed.
- (2) Community service that an offender performs under subsection (1) is taken to be performance of community service under the community correction order.
- (3) If an offender, who is subject to a community correction order on which is imposed a special condition referred to in section 42AP(1)(d), attends an educational or other program in accordance with the directions of a

42AU. Application to vary or cancel community correction order

- (1) An offender who is subject to a community correction order, or an authorised person, may apply to the court that made the order to vary or cancel the order.
- (2) A copy of the application and notification of the time and place of the hearing of the application is to be served, at least 7 days before the hearing, on –
 - (a) the offender, if the applicant is an authorised person; or
 - (b) the DPP and the offender's probation officer, if the application is made by the offender to the Supreme Court or the Court of Criminal Appeal; or
 - (c) the complainant or police prosecutor, and the offender's probation officer, if the application is made by the offender to a court of petty sessions.

(d) refuse to vary or cancel the community correction order.

(4) The court may vary or cancel a community correction order to which an application relates whether or not the application was to vary or cancel the order.

(5) The court must not vary or cancel the community correction order unless the court is satisfied that –

(a) changes in the offender's circumstances since the making of the order have rendered the offender unable to comply with any one or more of the conditions of the order; or

(b) the offender is no longer willing or able to comply with the order; or offender had complied with the community correction order, or other order, respectively, before its cancellation or while it was still in force.

(5) If –

- (a) an application is made under subsection (1) in relation to an offender in respect of whom a community correction order is or was on force; and
- (b) a court has found the offender guilty of an offence; and
- (c) the offender has, in committing the offence, breached a condition, of a community correction order that is or was in force, that is specified in section 42AO(a); and
- (d) an application was not made under section 42AW(1) in relation to the offence –

the court to which the application is made under subsection (1) must deal with the application as if the application were an application made to the court under section 42AW(1) and the court were the court that found the offender guilty of the offence.

42AW. Breach of condition of community correction order where offender found guilty of offence

- (1) If a court finds an offender guilty of an offence (in this section called the “new offence”) committed during the operational period of a community correction order in relation to the offender, an authorised person –
 - (a) may make an oral application to the court, while the offender is before the court in relation to the new offence, for the court to deal with the application under this section; and
 - (b) is to provide the offender in writing with the grounds for the oral application, if directed to do so by the court.
- (2) If the court that finds an offender guilty of an offence committed during the operational period of a community correction order is unable to immediately deal with an application to the court under subsection (1), the court may adjourn the proceedings and either grant the offender bail or remand the offender in custody.
- (3) If an application under subsection (1) is made to a court that is not the court that imposed the community correction order on the offender, the court may –

- (a) deal with the application under this section; or
 - (b) adjourn the proceedings to the court that made the order and either grant the offender bail or remand the offender in custody.
- (4) A court to which an application is made under subsection (1) or, if the application is adjourned under subsection (3) to another court, that other court, must –
- (a) confirm the community correction order, if it is still in force; or
 - (b) vary the community correction order, if it is still in force, by doing any one or more of the following:
 - (i) adding a special condition to the order;
 - (ii) removing or altering a special condition of the order;
 - (iii) extending, subject to section 42AQ, the operational period of the order; or

42AY. Arrest for failure to appear at certain applications, or for breach, or suspected breach, of order

- (1) If the person who makes an application under this Part is not the offender to whom the application relates, the court to which the application is made or adjourned under this Part may issue a warrant to arrest the offender if –
 - (a) the offender fails to appear at the hearing of the application; or
 - (b) reasonable efforts have been made to serve the application on the offender but have been unsuccessful.
- (2) Without limiting the generality of subsection (1)(b), reasonable efforts are to be taken to have been made to serve the application on an offender to whom a community correction order relates if a copy of the application is, during the operational period of the order, left at the premises which the person who makes the application believes to be the premises at which the offender resides or was last known to reside.
- (3) A police officer may arrest an offender to whom a community correction order relates if the police officer believes on reasonable grounds that the offender has
