Your Submission to the TPC Review: The Tasmanian Planning Commission must remain independent of the government for Tasmania to retain a democratic planning process.

Good faith in government is supported and upheld by planning bodies that are not selected by government ministers to push particular political agenda. Planning must therefore remain with the Tasmanian Planning Commission.

Major projects such as energy projects, forestry management, tourism, fisheries and other significant infrastructure projects can radically change the Tasmanian identity, sway economics and have massive social impacts on the welfare and quality of life for Tasmanian's. Government ministers need to be advised by independent planning bodies which give voice to the Tasmanian people.

Retain the Tasmanian Planning Commission for a future of transparent Governance.
