Your Submission to the TPC Review: Tasmanians deserve to have a say in the go-ahead of proposed developments, particularly major projects with serious local impacts, such as the Mount Wellington cable car, the gated community of Cambria Green, etc. Not to have that right of opinion reduces Tasmanians to being tourists in their own State, devaluing their lifestyle, reducing amenity and access to recreational areas, degrading the sense of community important to mental and physical wellbeing. Reviewing the Tasmanian Planning Commission threatens to stifle an important avenue for people to have a say against inappropriate and high impact projects. To introduce a review during the current economic crisis surrounding COVID19, particularly, is to trample the rights of local even further. To imagine that reviewing the Tasmanian Planning Commission is a positive economic step belies the consequence of community groups politicising their concerns and shifting their efforts to the court system. Keep the current powers of the Tasmanian Planning Commission as they are.
