Your Submission to the TPC Review: My experience through attending and appearing before the Tasmanian planning Commission, has been one of participating in a process that has rigour, transparency, and legitimacy

Nothing must allow this reputation be sullied by manipulation at a political level

The present attempt by government, is to move goal posts in order to expedite the plans of sundry entrepreneurs who wish to benefit from the current confusion, in achieving a undeserved interest; all without deigning to provide any detail, against which their plans must be judged

Both this measure, and the Major Projects Bill, act to dispense with public interest and involvement on any level

Giving juresdiction over to a notionally disinterested panel is not needed One already exists, and is without the shackles promised by the Major Projects Bill in it's most recent disguise

Herewith a link to an opinion which informs my view:
