Hi,

This consultation process is a complete sham, with the Government clearly intent on trying to push this terrible piece of legislation through the Parliament. It seems to think that because it won a rigged election where one Braddon candidate shouldn't of been able to run as one, gives the impression that they have a mandate to do whatever they took to the election and implement, don't think it works like that. Not all Lib voters agree on ALL YOUR POLICIES, it is impossible for someone to agree on all however many you took to the election. It basically comes down to the fact that the alternatives are even worse than you lot, which says a great deal about the state of politics in Tasmania, and is generally reflected across the world.

Anyway back to this terrible legislation, the acts it is trying to stop is focussed on Forestry protestors or Mining protestors, where these operations are occurring by definition on PUBLIC LANDS, which therefore gives the right to the PUBLIC to be on those lands. I am sure foresters and miners can protect themselves from protestors, who seem to basically chain themselves to equipment, and leave those particular people alone.

Protesting is a fundamental right, especially on PUBLIC land, and this terrible legislation should be forgotten about, as there are already mechanisms in place for dealing with these type of instances.

It is a continuation of Government looking after commercial and business interests at the expense of the ordinary people of this State. Because business LOBBY's government, and there is all this behind the scenes conversations with Business Groups to ensure the legislation is best for them, it has nothing to do with the so-called people who voted for you.

Just bury it and move on to something that helps the majority of the public not just a select few - hard to imagine, but try.
